

Jacqueline Delfgauw, PhD

Jacqueline Delfgauw has more than 15 years of work experience in academia and pharmaceutical industry. She holds a PhD in Molecular Genetics and a Master of Science in Biotechnology, Humangenetics and Tropical Ecology, from Julius-Maximilians-University Würzburg / Germany. Jacqueline completed postdoctoral training in basic research in the Nephrology Departments at Albert Einstein College of Medicine, Bronx, NY and Mount Sinai School of Medicine, New York City, NY. She started her career in the pharmaceutical industry at Grunenthal in 2006 and held various positions within clinical development at the Grunenthal Group over the past 10 years. Jacqueline worked initially at their Headquarters in Aachen / Germany, later successfully lead the clinical development group in the US-subsiary of Grunenthal for 7 years as Executive Director of Clinical Development, before moving to the Latin America organization of Grunenthal, where she effectively established a clinical development team in Mexico and Chile in her role as Executive Director of Clinical Product Development LatAm.

Jacqueline received leadership trainings at the renowned Wharton School and at INSEAD, and is currently working as Clinical Development Consultant (DELFGAAUW LLC) for Pharma, Biotech and Contract Research Organizations (CROs).

