

Jane Connell is VP and CIO of Enterprise and Corporate functions for Johnson & Johnson.

Jane is responsible for strategy and delivery of IT Solutions to support J&J at the enterprise level and also serves on the leadership board transforming J&J's global operating model.

Previously, Jane was Vice President, IT Global Operations responsible for strategy development and management of IT Operations. This included day-to-day operations and the implementation of the Global Service Center, now known as Integrated Service Management.

Jane has also served as Vice President, IT Strategic Sourcing. In this position, she and her organization enabled the global IT Strategy by delivering over $300M in cost savings and value. Jane played a direct role in transforming our environment by developing strategic partnerships and contracts with vendors such as Microsoft, Verizon, Lenovo, IBM, TCS and others.

Prior to joining the ITLT as the IT Strategic Sourcing Director, Jane was the WW Director, Non-Stock Procurement for the Consumer sector. In that role Jane developed and implemented strategies and tactics designed to bring Procurement expertise and tools to all C&PC indirect spending. The scope of annual expenditure she influenced was over $3 billion on products and services.

Jane drove strategies by aligning with the Consumer Group Operating Committee through the office of the Chief Financial Officer, Consumer's Regional CPOs and respective CFOs to deliver value in 2005, which included deliverance of $50MM+ in savings. In addition, she led the creation of several large global projects, appointed key personnel within the four regions, and deployed best practices utilizing Process Excellence methodologies.

Jane has 14 years within C&PC on the supply chain team, beginning with two years at McNeil Consumer, then moving on to the SLC for four years and eight years in Non-Stock Procurement supporting the Skillman group of companies. Prior to joining Johnson & Johnson, she spent five years with the Bristol Myers Products division.

She holds a B. A. in Management from Rider University.
