

Christian is leading the Early Development Workflow team in Roche's Research and Early Development Informatics (pREDi) organization. He is driving technology innovation into clinical trials. His current focus is adoption of mobile sensors for digital biomarker development and digital media for patient and investigator recruitment and engagement.

He had joined Roche as a director in the Emerging Technologies team - identifying game changing trends in the pharma Omics & Digital Health space and developing strategies to act on those. Now he is implementing them.