

Noel manages the Movidius Engineering team for Intel's New Technology Group. Movidius is transforming the future of computer vision and artificial intelligence (AI) to accelerate innovation for the next generation of smart and connected devices. Movidius is at the forefront of a new era of computing that enables new levels of intelligence for drones, robots, cameras, virtual and augmented reality.

Noel has founded and lead multiple high performing teams with an excellent track record of right first time product design.

Noel joined Intel in 2000 having graduated in 1988 in Electronic Engineering from University of Cork, Ireland.