

Dr. Amama Sadiq is the Medical Director at Clarion, a boutique life-sciences consulting firm. Since joining the firm in 2014, Dr. Sadiq has focused on leveraging her medical insights and clinical trial experience into shaping product assessment and commercialization strategies across multiple markets including gastroenterology, hepatology, immunology, and rare disease. During her time at Clarion, Dr. Sadiq has continued her lifelong passion of advancing patient care by continuing to lead and engage in critical discussions about NASH, an emerging public health epidemic. An entrepreneur at heart, Dr. Sadiq is also a co-founder and board member of LiverNet Corp. a not for profit foundation providing educational services and materials to health care professionals and members of the public regarding the prevention and treatment of liver disease. Dr. Sadiq is an MD with internal medicine training from University College London, conducted clinical research at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center/Harvard Medical school, and holds an MPH from the Harvard School of Public Health.