Lisa Uthgenannt

Chief Human Resources Officer, Laboratory Corporation of America Holdings

Lisa Uthgenannt is a seasoned global Human Resources executive with extensive experience in healthcare services, medical devices, pharmaceuticals, chemicals and specialty manufacturing industries, with a proven record of developing human resources strategies that deliver business impact.

As Chief Human Resources Officer at Laboratory Corporation of America Holdings, she is responsible for establishing and driving LabCorp's human resource strategies encompassing 60,000 employees. Working with a human resources team across LabCorp Diagnostics and Covance Drug Development, Ms. Uthgenannt is driving the development of an evolving, cohesive human resources model to manage talent and deliver quality service to employees. She reports directly to David King, Chief Executive Officer, LabCorp.

Ms. Uthgenannt was most recently Corporate Senior Vice President, Human Resources at Covance, where she was responsible for the human resources strategy for the company with more than 12,000 employees in 60 countries. Ms. Uthgenannt's relentless focus on leadership development tied to business outcomes was instrumental in deepening the company's management talent and positioning the business for success in a fast-paced healthcare services industry. She led the transformation of human resources service delivery to drive efficiencies and enhance the employee experience.

Prior to joining Covance in 2010, Ms. Uthgenannt held the numerous leadership positions at Johnson & Johnson, in both medical devices and pharmaceutical businesses. In her last role as Vice President, Human Resources for the Comprehensive Care sector, she served as a key advisor and executive coach to the Worldwide Chairman, helping to define the initial strategies and plans to advance the corporation's comprehensive approach to chronic disease management. She also led the organization in designing and implementing a streamlined business model to increase product pipeline performance and accelerated growth opportunities. Previous to Johnson & Johnson, Lisa worked at Aventis, and BetzDearborn Inc.
